Gathered in Paris on 3 November 2026 for a European meeting of delegations representing social struggles in the Spanish state, including delegations from Catalonia, France, Italy, Greece, Portugal, Belgium, UK we declare:

We are those who refuse to surrender to governments serving the capitalist class. We will not allow new forms of fascism to advance. We refuse to accept a world in which the social majority cannot live with dignity.

In recent weeks, mobilisations have erupted in our countries. A wave of protests has taken to the streets, bringing shared causes to the forefront—causes to which we have a duty to develop common responses.

On the one hand, we are witnessing the runaway rise in the cost of living: the impossibility of accessing housing, the growing difficulty of obtaining basic food, and the lack of affordable transport.

On the other, austerity is returning, with new social cuts linked to the demands of public-debt creditors and the arms race. Working-class people bear the consequences, through the loss of fundamental rig hts and the deterioration of public services such as education and healthcare.

Underlying all these crises is an economic model that seeks to perpetuate so-called economic growth at the expense of workers' exploitation and finite natural resources, putting a price on and speculating with the very conditions that make life habitable: the roof over our heads and the shared home that is our planet.

In the face of this wave of uprisings, mobilisations and expressions of popular strength across different countries, we declare together that we are ready to unite our voices in a common message capable of reaching every corner of the world and stirring the hearts of our societies.

We live in a time when solidarity cannot remain mere words: it must become an everyday practice, a tool for organising, and a force capable of transforming reality.

We therefore bring to social struggles in every European locality a proposal to unite our struggles, coordinate our forces and build an internationalist response to the injustices we share.

Let us march together in coordinated demonstrations across Europe on 20, 21 and 22 November.

Let us do so around the following common programme:

• Guarantee of the right to housing.

· Controls to decrease the price on housing, food and energy to guarantee decent living conditions.

• Higher wages and pensions to restore purchasing power and cope with the cost of living.

• Universal, high-quality public services and access education, and healthcare for everyone. Right to work and to a regular administrative situation to end racist barreers.

• Tax the rich to combat social inequality and fund collective needs.

• An end to rearmament policies and fossil fuels to achieve climate and social justice.

Long live the struggle of the working class, and long live internationalism!
